SUMMARY

Strategic Objective: A new model for social policy in Ukraine, which corresponds to the principles and standards of the social policy of the EU, improves the quality of human life, resists demographic changes, strengthens the level of social protection, contributes to the reduction of poverty, strengthens social unity, helps to overcome discrimination in all its forms and corresponds to the financial capabilities of the state.

1. The war caused and continues to cause irreparable damage to the social security of Ukraine. This resulted in:
  - o growing load on the system of social support and social insurance of the population due to a constant increase in the number of citizens who need to receive social, rehabilitation services and payments while simultaneously reducing revenues to state and local budgets and the Compulsory Pension and Social Insurance Funds;
  - o complication of information verification regarding the actual number of both adults and children who need social protection and support;
  - o destruction of social infrastructure objects, loss of access to personal affairs of beneficiaries of social support;
  - o specialists in the field of social support of the population also become forced migrants, which affects providing services to the population;
  - o the social support system does not have time to adapt to significant migration movements of citizens, changing the active hostilities areas and changing the list of temporarily occupied territories, which, among other things, complicates the implementation of social, social insurance and pension payments to citizens;
  - o emotional despair of citizens due to misunderstanding of their social rights and obligations during the war;
  - o insufficient coverage of communities by the network of institutions that provide social and rehabilitation services during the war, especially in areas with a mass stay of displaced persons;
  - o making it impossible for citizens of Ukraine who live in or near the zone of active hostilities, in temporarily uncontrolled territories of Ukraine, to receive their due payments and social services;
  - o the deepening of the vulnerability of less mobile population groups since the beginning of the war.
2. The mentioned factors are the consequences of the extensive social policy, the practice which Ukraine inherited from the Soviet times: the more benefits, subsidies and social advantages are given to citizens, the better the manifestation of the state's concern for its citizens was considered. At the same time, the economic capabilities of the state, the expediency and the quality of ensuring the promised and calculated were not taken into account. As a result, there is a constantly growing number of unstructured, poorly understood benefits, subsidies and social benefits, which are not supported by the financial capacity of the state, especially under the conditions of martial law. This poses a threat to the economic stability of the state and the formation and implementation of an effective social policy. There is insufficient targeting and efficiency of the use of funds, and a lack of prioritization of expenditures, which scatters resources and does not allow solving the problems of the beneficiaries.
3. The course determined by the President of Ukraine to "reboot the country" in the post-war period provides a chance to review the components of the existing outdated, and as it turned out, vulnerable to a large-scale social crisis.
4. On the way to EU membership, Ukraine should follow the fundamental principles of the EU's functioning, namely the "inseparability of social and economic progress" when formulating a new social policy. This principle means the impossibility and inadmissibility of achieving one to the detriment of the other. Thus, the social policy of the state lays down the principles and culture of mutual respect both between people and between people and institutions, both public and private, which fully corresponds to the vision of the European Commission for supporting policies of member states in the field of social inclusion (barrier-free) and social protection.
5. The post-war period will require an integrated (complex) strategy of social protection, considering the features associated with the special legal status of individual beneficiaries (in particular, veterans, Chernobyl disaster victims, internally displaced persons, etc.), the implementation of which will be ensured thanks to interdepartmental and interdisciplinary coordination. Therefore, there is a need to review the components of the existing social system to ensure opportunities for people to live a full and independent life. It is necessary to establish clear, transparent, and objective criteria for obtaining the right to social services and social benefits.

6. Social protection programs should help people in difficult life circumstances. It is also necessary to support the human dignity of both current and future pensioners so that upon reaching a respectable age, people continue to be patriotic and active members of society and pass on their life experiences to the next generations of Ukrainian citizens.
7. The pension system is based mainly on the principle of solidarity ("first pillar"). This does not allow pensioners upon retirement to receive a replacement level of even 40% of their previous income. Therefore, the introduction of mandatory funded pension («second pillar») is a strategic task to motivate the population to save for retirement. This, in turn, will stimulate legal employment, first for young people.
8. One of the tools for the implementation of such a comprehensive program of social protection should be the digital "Unified Information System of the Social Sphere" (hereinafter - UISSS), which is being implemented by the Ministry of Social Policy of Ukraine. The UISSS should ensure accessibility/inclusivity, transparency, ease of receiving social services and payments by beneficiaries, internally displaced persons, persons and families in difficult life circumstances, people with disabilities, military personnel, veterans, and pensioners, regardless of the place of registration throughout the territory of Ukraine. The key limitation of using such a system is insufficient digital literacy among beneficiaries of the social system, incomplete Internet coverage of the territory of Ukraine, and the economic inaccessibility of technical means for using this system.
9. The first step to achieving the goal of a comprehensive social protection program should be to conduct a comprehensive analysis of the current financial obligations of the state in the social sphere, the available volume of social and insurance services and payments and the conditions of access to them, and to forecast models of the effective functioning of the social support system in the post-war period.
10. It is necessary to establish clear, transparent, and objective criteria for obtaining the right to social services and social benefits. Social protection programs should help people in difficult life circumstances. At the same time, it is necessary not to forget about supporting the human dignity of both today and future pensioners, so that upon reaching a respectable age, people continue to be patriotic and active members of society and pass on their life experiences and family values to the next generations of Ukrainian citizens.
11. Under the principles of the EU, the beneficiary of the implementation of the social policy of Ukraine should be every citizen of the country, and, despite the branching of the directions of such activity, the priorities were, are and remain: social support that reveals the potential of a person and supports a decent standard of living for everyone, modernization spheres of social protection and pension provision, expansion of citizens' access to digital services in the social sphere, barrier-freeness and overcoming discrimination in all its manifestations.
12. Social policy should be people-centred, flexible, and able to provide services and payments regardless of the place of stay in Ukraine and be based on long-term goals following the EU social policy. Social policy cannot be formed separately from employment policy, which is developing in Ukraine as a component of economic policy.
13. Chapter 21 of Section V of the Association Agreement between Ukraine and the EU defines the objectives of cooperation in the field of employment, social policy, and equal opportunities, and contains clear guidelines on how social policy and employment and equal opportunity policies are interdependent. It is an axiom that the better the labour market is developed, the more resources the state receives to support and implement social and insurance programs for those who need them. The main task of providing social support to citizens is not to replace the "person-to-person" relationship with money, but to encourage people to independently earn income to support their families. A person can count on the state, but not transfer to it the care of oneself, which should become a general principle of social support for the population.
14. In the conditions of martial law, the state must make a difficult decision regarding the revision of the current social protection programs from the standpoint of their expediency and ability to perform, which requires firm political will and systematic control over its implementation.
15. The priority areas of Ukrainian social policy remain the following: increasing the level of pension provision, digital transformation of the social sphere, social support for the poor and people who have found themselves in difficult life circumstances, and barrier-free integration of all members of society, in particular people with disabilities, other low-mobility groups into the socio-economic community life
16. Taking into account the stability of political priorities in the social sphere, the new model of Ukraine's social policy, which meets the principles and standards of EU social policy and the financial capabilities of the state, will improve the quality of human life, resist demographic changes, strengthen the level of social protection, contribute to the reduction of poverty, strengthen social unity, will help overcome discrimination in all its forms and strengthen citizens' trust in the authorities.

17. When developing the components of a new social policy, it is worth taking advantage of the trust in Ukraine and the desire to help on the part of the EU member states, as well as their experience in implementing social reforms.
